On why he's doing another chat show when the channels already have so many of these

Here is the discussion show which premiered on Zee last Sunday and different from the numerous other chat shows now on the air? The others are old cases like shows in the local media. They are recognizable faces usually making or losing real-time money and/or reputation. The other factor is that they don't have the viewers to brag. This is not so much a personality-oriented show as an issue-based one. Viewers will be interested by the host's take, and will then begin to watch it for its content—issues of national interest. These vary from

Do you want to keep your job, Joshi asks his men

Bombay Probe
The Shri. Joshi's men have been asked to keep their jobs, but the minister has asked them to submit a self-appraisal of their work during their tenure in office.
The letters, which went out last week, ask ministers to give details of schemes launched or implemented by them in their respective departments. The chief minister had also asked for the progress of the schemes introduced in the respective departments, the ministering gives while campaigning for the legislative assembly elections.
The decision to appraise the performance of ministers appears to have been taken after Shri. Sachin Chitambar, minister, analysed the working of the ministers in order to improve the image of the state government. He had expressed satisfaction at the 'functioning' of some of the ministers. The minister is known to be dealing with busy ministers and the minister who accept their assignments in Mumbai.
There are several complaints against the ministers, the most common being their reluctance to visit their constituencies. It is said that they do not visit their constituencies. It is said that they do not visit their constituencies. It is said that they do not visit their constituencies.
